

Santos Mahogany

Santos Mahogany (Myroxylon balsamum) is a rich, dark mahogany-colored wood that is extremely dense and stable. Its superior hardness and color fastness make it an excellent choice over genuine mahogany, which is too soft for most flooring uses. Most of the wood exhibits a medium to dark red/brown mahogany tone. This engineered floor is backed against a bamboo core and bamboo backing, making for a truly ecological flooring choice. It is precisely milled with square edges for a smooth surface.

Tigerwood

“Tigerwood” comes from a tree known as Goncalo Alves (Astronium fraxinifolium). Tigerwood ranges in color from light to reddish brown to deep mahogany red-brown with a striking figure created by beautiful, bold, brown to nearly black irregular markings or striping. The texture is fine to medium and uniform, with a fine grain, varying from straight to interlocked and wavy. Tigerwood exhibits a large degree of color change with a darkening of the background from an orange-tan to a deep reddish brown.

Pecan

The Pecan tree is a large deciduous lowland tree that is native to North America. The wood of the Pecan tree has a beautiful variation of colors. The heartwood has a brown reddish color, with darker stripes on it, while the sapwood has a white, creamy color with fine brown to pink lines. This is considered to be one of the harder woods available at 1830 on the Janka Scale.
