

Understanding Warranties

Owens Corning Siding is backed by a nonprorated transferable limited lifetime warranty. That sounds good, but what does it really mean? We've broken it down for you to show you how well-protected your investment is when you choose products made by Owens Corning.

Nonprorated: A prorated warranty sets limits on the amount of the original cost that can be recouped over time. The Owens Corning vinyl siding and accessory warranty is nonprorated, so your entire investment, or initial expense, is covered for the life of the warranty.

Transferable: If you ever decide to sell your home, the warranty can be transferred one time to the next owner of your home. Many manufacturers declare a warranty void once it has been transferred to a second owner.

Limited lifetime: Owens Corning siding is warrantied for a lifetime, which means that you can enact the terms of your warranty any time after the siding has been installed. "Limited" refers to there being limits to the types of problems that are covered by a warranty. For complete details, access the actual warranties listed below.
